

An editorial homepage built around one unfair advantage

A homepage concept for a fictional two-attorney workers' compensation firm, demonstrating the approach I bring to content-heavy legal sites: editorial typography, positioning-first hierarchy, and consultation CTAs that feel like a natural next step rather than a hard sell.

THE DESIGN BRIEF

Bennett & Bennett Law (fictional): a father-and-son workers' compensation and disability firm in Southwest Virginia. Strong substance — three decades of practice, affordable payment plans, and one genuinely differentiating fact: the younger partner spent twelve years as an insurance claims adjuster before becoming an attorney.

The challenge given to the design: make that "came from the other side" credibility land within the first screen, keep an educational, editorial feel, and turn a content-heavy page into a conversion path without a hard sell. This is the same problem most small law firms have — great substance, invisible on their own website.

NEW RIVER VALLEY, VIRGINIA · A FATHER & SON PRACTICE

Your attorney should know the insurer's playbook. Ours spent twelve years inside it.

Before practicing law, J. R. Bennett evaluated injury claims as a workers' compensation insurance adjuster. He knows exactly how the other side builds a denial — because he used to build them.

THE INSIDE ADVANTAGE

Attorney at Law. Former Claims Adjuster.

Most lawyers guess how the insurance company will value your claim. Ours used to write those valuations. That inside fluency changes how your case is built, argued, and settled.

WHAT WE DO

Two practices. One promise: you are not a case number.

We concentrate on the two systems most likely to fail an injured Virginian — workers' compensation and Social Security disability — so we can know them completely.

No. 1

Virginia Workers' Compensation

When you're hurt on the job, the insurer's doctors and adjusters start building their file immediately. We build yours better.

§ Orthopedic & traumatic injuries

§ Occupational exposures & illness

§ Wage loss & permanent disability benefits

§ Lifetime medical benefits

§ Survivors' & death benefits

No. 2

Social Security Disability

Most SSDI claims are denied the first time — not because they lack merit, but because the paperwork is a language of its own. We're fluent.

§ SSDI denial representation & appeals

§ Disability insurance benefits

§ Supplemental Security Income (SSI)

§ Hearings before administrative law judges

§ Back-pay & benefit calculations

THE INSIDE ADVANTAGE

What changes when your lawyer came from the other side

Workers' compensation cases are won and lost on how insurers value, delay, and deny claims. J. R. Bennett spent twelve years making those decisions from the inside. That isn't a footnote. It's the strategy.

He knows how your claim gets valued

Insurers put a number on your case early — quietly, and rarely in your favor. He knows how that number is built, and how to prove it wrong.

ii.

Denials follow patterns he's seen from inside

Delay tactics, paper reviews, "pre-existing condition" arguments — he's watched every one of them get drafted. None of them surprise us.

iii.

Independent medical exams get real scrutiny

When the insurer's doctor minimizes your injury, we challenge the exam the way an adjuster fears most — on the record it was built from.

iv.

Settlements get negotiated at true value

First offers are calculated to close files cheaply. We negotiate from what the insurer's own math says the claim is worth — not what they hope you'll take.

At a high-volume firm, you are a file. Here, you are the reason the firm exists.

— THE FOUNDING PRINCIPLE OF BENNETT & BENNETT

For over three decades, the Bennett family has served the people of Southwest and Central Virginia.

When father and son partnered, they built a different kind of firm — one that deliberately walked away from the impersonal machinery of high-volume practices and returned legal counsel to where it belongs: on the client.

That means you talk to your attorney, not a case manager. It also means quality representation at rates working families can afford, with low down payments and payment plans available.

DESIGN CONCEPT — BENNETT & BENNETT LAW IS A FICTIONAL FIRM CREATED FOR PORTFOLIO DEMONSTRATION

This page is a design exercise. The firm, attorneys, address, and phone number are fictional; any resemblance to a real business is coincidental. Nothing here constitutes legal advice.

The full homepage concept: serif editorial hero built around the insider credential, trust-stat strip, structured practice areas, a dark "Inside Advantage" section, and a persistent consultation path.

Four decisions that do the selling

i. Lead with the unfair advantage

The insider credential is the headline ("Your attorney should know the insurer's playbook. Ours spent twelve years inside it."), a standalone credential card, and a four-point section. Positioning first; decoration never.

ii. Editorial typography that signals authority

Fraunces (serif display) paired with Public Sans — polished headlines over highly readable body text. Content-heavy legal sites win on trust, and type is the fastest trust signal on the page.

iii. CTAs as a next step, not a sales pitch

Every section ends where the reader naturally arrives: a free consultation. Sticky header CTA, inline section links, and a closing form with a response-time promise — conversion architecture without pressure tactics.

iv. Performance-friendly by construction

One HTML file, lean CSS, two font families, no page builder, no jQuery, no sliders. Content is visible without JavaScript; animations are progressive enhancement. Built the way a maintainable custom WordPress theme should be.

SCOPE

Homepage concept: design system, typography, palette, eight content sections, responsive to mobile, working consultation form pattern.

STACK

Hand-coded HTML/CSS with vanilla JS enhancements — the same lightweight approach I bring to custom Gutenberg/ACF WordPress themes.

CONTENT

All copy, branding, and business details are original fiction written for this exercise. No real firm's content, design, or identity was used.

DESIGN CONCEPT — FICTIONAL BUSINESS

This case study is a self-initiated design exercise. Bennett & Bennett Law is a fictional firm created for portfolio demonstration; any resemblance to a real business is coincidental.
